

Research Brief: Artificial Intelligence & Cloud Scaling

Artificial intelligence and machine learning algorithms are transforming modern cloud computing architectures. Deep learning models require high-performance GPU clusters for training neural networks. Natural language processing and semantic search engines enable automated document understanding. Web applications use cloud server hosting to achieve global scalability. Data mining frameworks extract structural databases from unstructured documents.